"Meyer mixed the cream before it was put into the freezer, and I was there when he put it in. I asked him if he was sure the can was perfectly clean, for I have always been careful about that. He told me it was clean.

"Several doctors have been in here to speak with me about their patients who were made sick by the cream, and they told me that they were all getting along well."

Henry Meyer is still under arrest at Capt. Gunner's station. He was taken to the Yorkville Police Court this morning, but as the licent of Health, which is investigating the matter, was not yet ready to make a report, Meyer was remanded by Justice Me. Malton until to-morrow morning.

The loard of Health, which is investigating the matter, was not yet ready to make a report, Meyer was remanded by Justice Me. Malton until to-morrow morning.

The symptoms of all the patients were similar to those of acute cholera morbus, and many of the physicians at first believed that this was the complaint. The large number of cases which they were called upon to treat, however, soon led them to the conclusion that their patients were suffering from metallic poisoning.

Dr. Alfred L. Feebe, assistant chemist in the Sanitary Superintendent's Office, who is assisting Dr. Martin in the investigation, says that an examination of Brinkmann's ice-cream freezer showed that the paddle had chafed the sides and bottom of the jar, and flaked off in several places the film of in plate which protected the copper from corrosion.
